AN INFERNO: Forty minutes after a tanker truck filled with fuel went into the ditch on Hwy 121 near the Essonville Line on Monday afternoon, the flames still overwhelmed Monmouth firefighters. Miraculously, the driver of the truck was able to escape and was airlifted to McMaster burn centre. He had apparently swerved to miss a couple of bears on the road.

A truck driver was miraculously able to jump out of his burning rig after it burst into flames in an accident which sent thick black plumes of smoke across the Highlands on Monday afternoon.

The driver, whose name has not yet been released by the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the OPP, apparently swerved to miss a couple of bears on Hwy 121 just north of the Essonville Line shortly after 2 p.m.

He lost control of his tanker, which was carrying a load of gasoline. It went into the east ditch, hitting a hydro pole and bursting into flames. A wide swath of the Highlands was suddenly without electricity.

"There was a really big bang and there was a really little one," says Robin Newell, of the sound of the truck exploding. Newell was reading a book in her home about 2 km up the road from where the accident happened.

"The bangs shook the whole house," says Newell.

Richard Andrews of Kitchener is a truck driver who was on his way to his Trappers Trail cottage when he saw the intense black smoke suddenly billow into the sky. He raced to the scene to see if he could help.

"The truck driver had skin torn off his arm and contusions.

He was in very deep shock," Andrews says.

"He told us he got free himself."

The driver was transported to Haliburton Hospital by ambulance. A couple of hours later he was in stable condition and about to be flown to the

Trent Severn extension idea strikes shoal

The proposal to extend the Trent Severn Waterway through the Highlands seems dead in the water, if county council's low level of enthusiasm is any indication.

On Wednesday, council heard the report of consultants who were hired to explore the feasibility of using a series of trucks and trailers to transport boats through un-navigable sections of the Gull River from Coboconk to Minden and then over to the Lake Kashagawigamog chain.

Not only is the proposal going to be expensive at a time when few federal or provincial grants are available for such an undertaking, but there is not expected to be an overwhelming

County transportation committee heading down a dead-end road

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Since the county's transportation service is going no where, it will likely hit a dead end in a few weeks.

"Unless some new direction comes or a new need arises, the committee will cease to exist on September 10," the county's CAO Les Shepherd told county council on Wednesday. "The committee put a lot of effort into co-ordinating transportation services and providing new ones, but none of the efforts have met with success."

The transportation committee was a direct outcome of the county's strategic planning process. At a series of public meetings, residents talked about how difficult it was for people without transportation to get to various appointments and social or recreational events.

The committee spent months working out a plan of making better use of existing services. Haliburton County Home Support Services was chosen as the sponsor agency since it already had a "fleet" of volunteer drivers. Scheduled trips were organized between various communities in the Highlands as well as to places such as Peterborough. People could also call the "Get There" service to request a ride.

Without any government subsidies, however, the passenger's cost of reimbursing the volunteer drivers for their expenses made even that alternative too expensive.

"On a full-cost recovery basis, it's expensive and people can find less expensive alternatives," Shepherd said. Council joined Shepherd in expressing disappointment that the committee's hard work had not resulted in a viable service.

'Clunkers' can help charity and beautify area

AM AND JOE SMITH have a suggestion for people who want to beautify Haliburton by getting rid of that old clunker parked in the yard, and help a worthwhile cause as an added benefit. A few weeks ago, they wanted to dispose of their old car, a "dead Dynasty." They phoned the diabetes association, one of the many charities which will pick up old cars for free and then sell them for parts if they don't run, and "starter cars" for those which still manage to respond when the key is turned in the ignition. They faxed the form to the diabetes association on Monday, and someone from the association arrived on Friday to tow away their donation. As an extra bonus, the Smiths got a receipt for an income tax deduction. If you want to take part, call AADCO Vehicle Disposal Service at 1-800-661-5973 or 416-385-8308 or the Canadian Diabetes Association at 1-416-363-3373.

news and events worth noting

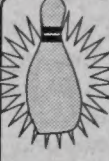

The Scouting movement is proud of its contributions to youth - and so it should be, according to recent statistics. From September 1998 to August 1999 in the Highlands area (Bancroft, Maynooth, Minden, Haliburton, Whitney and Wilberforce), 25 volunteers contributed 7,500 hours of service and the community. This equates to $75,000 worth of education, social and recreation programs being delivered to more than 70 young people in the area. If you would like to get involved or want to find out what's available where you live, call 1-888-815-4722 or e-mail scoutswpr@ptbo.igs.net.

If you need to replace an Ontario health card that's been lost or damaged or contains incorrect information, you can go to the Minden Hospital on September 2. The Ministry of Health is bringing its mobile health card clinic to the hospital on that day only, and you must make an appointment first by calling, collect, 905-434-3700 or 905-576-2870.

Caregivers of people with Alzheimer's may be interested to note a meeting about "powers of attorney for persona care and finance" on September 15 at the Marycrest Home for the Aged, 200 St. Luke's Avenue in Peterborough. The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. and there is no charge. For more information, call 1-800-561-2588.

County rushes towards restructuring

In a surprise move, local councils given month to consider the melding of nine municipalities into three

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

You've heard of "hurry up and wait"?

Well, flip that idea around and you'll have county council's most recent approach to deciding whether some municipalities should merge together.

After spending at least three years talking about the idea and not making any decisions, on Wednesday, county council gave itself a one-month ultimatum to change the map of political boundaries.

In an unanimous decision, council voted to "direct staff to prepare a comprehensive proposal for municipal restructuring in Haliburton County based upon the following scenarios:

- "the amalgamation of the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden, Lutterworth and Snowdon

- "the amalgamation of the townships of Sherborne (et al) and Stanhope

- "and the amalgamation of the townships of Glamorgan, Monmouth, Cardiff and Bicroft; "Further that the proposal will be discussed and voted upon at the September 22, 1999 meeting of County Council."

This is the same re-alignment that a different county council considered and rejected in the 1970s.

After months of debate, why the sudden rush?

A recent communiqué from the Minister of Municipal Affairs has a lot to do with it.

"Despite a consensus in each region that municipal government has become too costly, too complex and too inefficient, nothing has happened," Steve Gilchrist says in a news release. "That's why we're acting decisively to protect the interests of taxpayers."

Although Gilchrist is targeting four regional governments - Haldimand-Norfolk, Hamilton-Wentworth, Ottawa-Carleton and Sudbury - local politicians are worried that Haliburton County could be next.

As of August 23, residents and politicians in those four regions are being given 90 days "for local discussion and consultation about how to improve local government."

"Improvements" in provincial parlance tend to mean cost-cutting amalgamations. The press release says "the Ontario government intends to introduce legislation this fall to formalize and implement restructuring proposals for each region shortly after the recommendations are received" from the special advisors who will be appointed to oversee the review process.

Meanwhile, "municipalities within counties and in northern Ontario and separated cities are strongly encouraged to continue their restructuring initiatives."

"It's pretty hard when three-quarters of Ontario has amalgamated to leave one-quarter (including Haliburton County) untouched," said Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey. "What you're going to hear from (MPP Chris Hodgson during a meeting with local politicians on Friday) is we're not going to be able to survive the way we are. We think we look good but that's not the way the government thinks."

"We need to get off our butts and get serious... I want to be part of the decision to keep Haliburton County intact," Fearrey said, voicing a worry that if Haliburton County does not act on its own, then a decision to perhaps merge this county with a neighbour may be imposed on the county by the province.

"If we don't do something ourselves, it will be done for us," Monmouth Reeve Keith Tallman agreed.

Dysart et al is not affected by Wednesday's vote because it is already the county's largest municipality, taking in Haliburton village, West Guilford, Kennisis Lake and Harcourt.

"For five and a half years we've talked about realignment," said Snowdon Reeve Ross Rigney. "We are capable of making the decision yet we haven't made it."

He doesn't foresee any layoffs should amalgamation take place since many staff members are nearing retirement age. Staffing costs could therefore be reduced through attrition.

Cardiff Reeve Doug Holman said Cardiff and Bicroft - which is surrounded by Cardiff township already - have agreed to amalgamate, but he believes that should be allowed to take place before there are any talks about amalgamating with Monmouth and Glamorgan.

"We do agree on amalgamation but the timing..." said Bicroft Reeve Bill Howe.

Lutterworth Reeve Jim McMahon says that although amalgamation talks between Lutterworth and its neighbours have broken down, his council is in favour of the proposed realignment as long as all municipalities go ahead with the entire plan.

Stanhope Reeve Eleanor Harrison was worried about asking staff to do a "comprehensive" report. "Our CAOs have been put through hell (pulling together statistics for other amalgamation proposals in the past) and I will not do that to our CAO because there are too many political decisions to be made first."

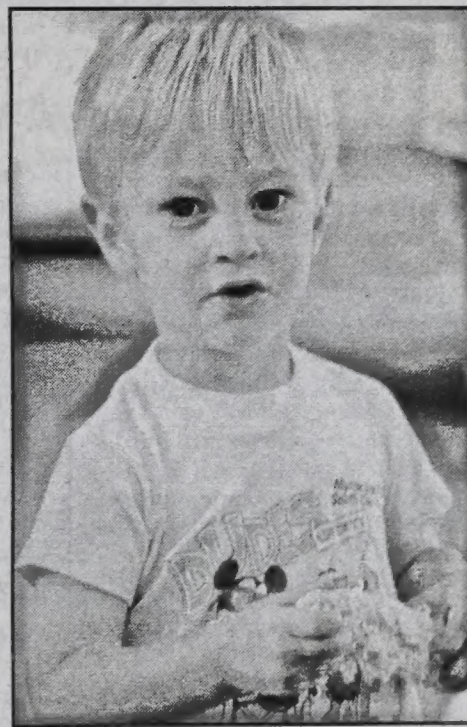

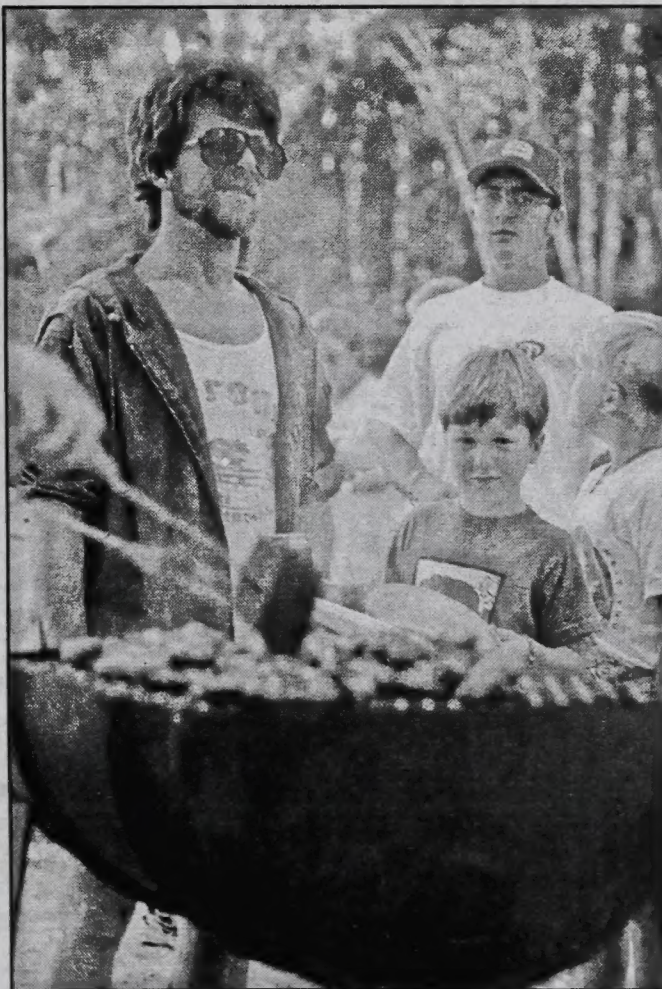

Fearrey allayed her fears when he said the province has a simple form for municipalities to fill out. He added that if need be, extra staff could be hired in the short term to do the paperwork.

Not opposed to amalgamation, Harrison said that in the "worst case scenario," municipalities could amalgamate and there would be no cost savings. "If you can live with the worst case scenario, you can live with something that's better."

There was some talk about whether other boundaries should be proposed. "Maybe Sherborne wants to go with Dysart," said Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed, who could also see an amalgamation of Sherborne, Dysart and Stanhope.

In the end, however, county councillors voted unanimously in favour of the motion's realignment configurations. Given the county's history and travel patterns, this realignment makes the most sense, politicians said.

It would cost between $2.2-million and $3.5-million to provide recreational boaters with the expanded route, says Cumming Cockburn Limited, Consulting Engineers and Planners.

Meanwhile, operating the new system would incur an annual deficit projected between $61,000 and $97,000.

Another fact that generated a lacklustre response from council was the projection that 70 per cent of users will be people who already live or cottage along the chain. "You're likely to see six non-residential boats per day in a typical season," project manager Kevin Walters told councillors, saying that between 800 to 3,800 people would be expected to traverse the system a season. "The economic impact is an infusion of new money that works out to about 1,000 new people a year."

(At a Minden council meeting the next day, councillors said they could attract that many new people through Timbersports or the Sled Dog Derby.)

Over five years, the consultants said the expanded route could generate $160,000 in economic spin-offs a year, but Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jeanne Anthon said that since most users would have been spending money in the Highlands anyway, it wouldn't be new money. "It's just a shifting of funds."

Cardiff Reeve Doug Holman questioned whether users would spend the $160 per trip predicted by the consultants, especially since traversing the new route could be done in four hours.

"The real issue is recreational infrastructure," said consultant Allan Hope. "It has ancillary tourism benefits but it won't reshape your economy and infuse millions of dollars into it..."

"Will it ever generate revenue to replace its cost? Highly unlikely."

“Will it ever generate revenue to replace its cost? Not likely”

CONSULTANT ALLAN HOPE

Clearance heights of existing bridges and culverts and the depth of water are two of the major physical obstacles. Although most bridges along the route have a clearance of at least six feet – which still isn't high enough to accommodate larger boats and restricts access of houseboats altogether – a bridge in Minden has four or five feet clearance depending on the time of year.

The existing Trent Severn Waterway has 22' clearance and a guaranteed depth of six feet (thanks to water from Haliburton's reservoir lakes. When asked by Stanhope Reeve Eleanor Harrison, the consultants said an expanded route would not require any more water than is currently drawn down.)

Another limitation on the size of boats is the capacity of trucks and trailers to pull them across stretches of the system. Thirty-feet would be the maximum length of boat allowed.

As to the fear that an expanded system would increase the risk of invading species such as zebra mussels entering the Highlands, consultants said that on the affected lakes, the invading species are already there.

On the plus side, the proposal gives Haliburton County access to the economic benefits of the TSW, which is especially important since the Highlands provides the water to run the system. It's also "an opportunity to reveal Haliburton's scenery and attributes" to a new audience. Haliburton would be able to declare itself the highest navigable point in Ontario.

(On the down side, the consultants said use of the TSW has declined 10 percent since the 1980s. "The Trent system should be a major tourism attraction and it isn't.")

As part of the feasibility study, the consultants chose an overland route from Coboconk to Shadow Lake. At Silver Lake there are narrows with "an awkward channel." Trucks and trailers would be needed to get across Norland.

At Moore Falls, water would be shifted to only one of two dams and an existing marine railway would be used to pull boats across to Gull Lake. There's a shallow section of Gull Lake where submerged logs would have to be removed.

In Minden, boats would be pulled out at the ramp on Peck Street and then taken by trailer through the village to South Lake Road, and then down Bat Lake Road to Canning Lake, where boats can now enjoy the five-lake chain that reaches Haliburton village. The problem area in Haliburton is the narrows between Grass Lake and Head Lake. Its "marshy shore is difficult to follow through the snaking channel." Parts of Head Lake are only four feet deep.

Anthon asked if Fisheries and Oceans had been asked whether it would approve of dredging or changes to the river or lake bottom. The consultants said they hadn't and that an environmental assessment would be needed before the project could go ahead.

"Some options may require the acquisition of real estate," the consultants added, including the acquisition of a former landing at Canning Lake at a projected cost of $80,000.

The consultants say other river systems, such as Ottawa, successfully use trucks and trailers to haul boats.

The proposal is being spearheaded by Dave Willis, chairman of the Minden BIA. He secured $22,000 in federal funding to do the feasibility study.

Since it is not clear whether county council would pay a portion of the project's costs, it was suggested that the consultants approach each of the municipalities directly affected.

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

If 9-1-1 is ever to be available in Haliburton County, then municipal governments will have to be less territorial when it comes to road names, county councillors say.

Before Bell Canada will consider extending the emergency phone service to the Highlands, it needs to know that when and if an ambulance is dispatched to Pine Drive through 9-1-1 there won't be any chance of confusion. Would that be Pine Drive in West Guilford or Pine Drive in Gooderham or Pine Drive in Wilberforce?

The problem is there are prob-

County says co-operation between municipalities over road names is next step ably several instances of various municipalities having the same road names. That means at least one of the names will have to be changed. Which municipality is going to blink first?

"I hope we don't fight with one another when it comes to road naming," Cardiff Reeve Doug Holman said at Wednesday's county council meeting.

Council agreed to start an inventory of all road names, including those of private roads. This will not be an easy task, since not all private roads have names. As well, each municipality does not have a list of all of its private roads.

(At Anson, Hindon and Minden's council meeting the next day, an example of how difficult this task will be arose. A group of residents has applied to name their road Hicks Road. But one of the councillors mentioned he's seen a private road sign with the same name. Council deferred making a decision on the Hicks Road designation until it received more information about existing names.)

Council will also take advantage of computerized assessment maps to proceed with a Geographic Information System (GIS) plan.

Some councillors worried, however, that local governments would find themselves financially liable if the road name confusion isn't cleared before any type of GIS mapping is in place. What if an ambulance goes to the wrong place because two similar road names exists and the family sues the county?

Lake associations will be approached about helping sort out all the various road names and this information will be compiled on a master list.

Other suggestions including calling all private roads "lanes" or giving all private roads an address in the 20,000. Bell will also have to figure out what's to be done about people who are still on a party line.

An $1,100 swim:

□ 11-year-old swimmer raises money for health services foundation by achieving double crossing of Kashagawigamog

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Taking things one stroke at a time, 11-year-old Karen Cox-Gurdon amazed herself, and her cheering section, when she completed her double crossing of Lake Kashagawigamog in 37 minutes last Tuesday.

But what deepened the glow of pride on her face was the realization that in setting herself such a challenge, she was able to raise more than $1,100 for the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

Most 11-year-olds cannot contemplate four-digit sums. Karen has never seen that much money before and topping the $1,000 mark was a thrill she hadn't expected to enjoy. It's almost too much to be true.

Knowing so many people were supporting her financially made the task both more difficult and much easier.

"I couldn't fall asleep the night before," she says, taking a well-earned break on the porch of her grandparents' home high above Lake Kashagawigamog. "I waited and waited and waited (to sleep.) I was scared because I was pretty sure I was going to make it but what wouldn't happen if I didn't?"

She needn't have tossed and turned.

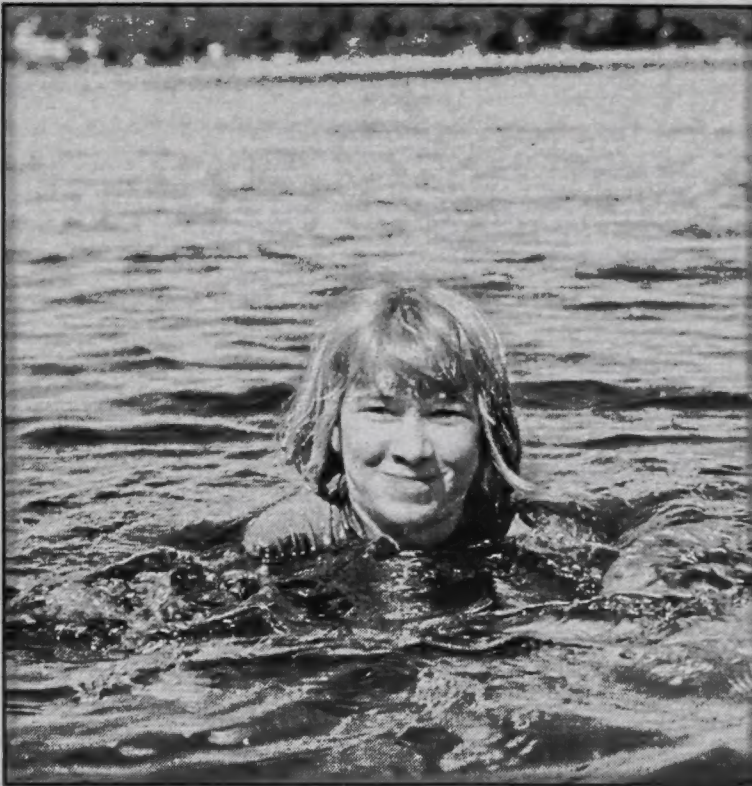

At 9:07 on Tuesday morning, with a cheering crowd on the shore and her grandmother Willie Cox and sister Heather in a paddleboat and her grandfather Jack and mother Marg in a two boat, she took her first stroke towards the opposite shore. Covered in Vaseline to keep the cold at bay – her practice swims were so chilly in early August she primarily trained by bicycling instead – she kept her eyes on the far horizon and simply didn't waver in her determination to reach it. Once there, she simply turned around and focused on her grandparents' dock to get her home, a distance of a couple of kilometres.

Many people were late in arriving to cheer her on for the final stretch because they hadn't expected her to be finished so soon!

Two years ago, Karen did a single crossing of the lake as a personal challenge. Then, last year she was asked to join Vicki Keith's swim team at Variety Village in Toronto. Vicki inspired the young swimmers with her tales of heroic achievements: the double crossing of Lake Ontario and setting 15 World Records, including being the first person to swim all the Great Lakes. In setting such challenging goals, Keith has raised more than $800,000 for Variety Village and has earned the distinction of being named to the Order of Canada and the Terry Fox Hall of Fame.

Impressed by how much money Keith has raised, Karen came up with the idea of a fundraising swim for the Haliburton Highlands Health

Last Tuesday, Karen Cox-Gurdon set out for the opposite shore of Lake Kashagawigamog and didn't stop until she reached it – and then headed back to her grandparents' house. By setting such a goal for herself, and with the help of her nine-year-old sister Heather, below, Karen was able to raise $1,100 for the health services foundation.

Services Foundation. With the help of her mother, grandparents and sister Heather (her father had to stay in the city to work), Karen set about getting people to pledge her.

Now it's everyone else's turn to be proud of Karen.

"I love it when young people set goals and accomplish them, and when they do it to help someone else, that makes it even more special," says Vicki Keith in a telephone interview. "Karen is amazing."

"I'm really proud of Karen for coming up with the idea to raise money and of Heather for supporting her," says Willie Cox.

Her mom Marg noticed "once the date was set it was hard to sustain the momentum but the fact so many people phoned helped her maintain her motivation and confidence."

Nine-year-old Heather sometimes got jealous of all the attention her older sister was getting, but that didn't stop her from being Karen's top supporter. Next year, Heather might raise money for the Foundation by bicycling down the abandoned rail corridor.

Both girls will have lots of stories to tell when they go back to Williamson Road Public School in Toronto's Beaches district. Perhaps Karen will inspire others the way she was inspired by Vicki Keith. If that happens, then the world will be a richer place indeed.

Haliburton County has the beauty, the charm and the potential – and now the Chamber of Commerce has the money to let the rest of the world know it.

On Wednesday, county council voted unanimously in favour of a $47,500 funding package, money the Chamber will use to tap into other funding opportunities to further increase its ability to reach new markets.

"The world's going by this county and in order not to be left behind, it's going to cost some money," Chamber board member Dennis Casey told council.

Haliburton County can't compete against other areas which spend tens of thousands more dollars in marketing, he said. "Last year we were in virtually no provincial publications and our neighbours were. The reason is money... It takes a lot of money to tell people we're here."

And once people discover the Highlands for the first time, they tend to come back again, added Chamber president Bryan Kernohan.

Stanhope Reeve Eleanor Harrison noted that the draft report of a comprehensive marketing plan shows that as a county, "we are low on per capita spending" for marketing.

"What we tried to do here," Kernohan said of the funding proposal, "is to find areas to spend your money in partnership projects."

The chamber will do that in the following ways:

- $4,000 of the county's money will be used to buy into a $60,000 nordic skiing marketing project. There are 749,000 people in Ontario who are skiing enthusiasts, many of them cottagers who could be enticed to spend the weekend in the Highlands. "This is a market we're not competing for, yet we have some of the best trails in North America with some very unique traits that no other areas are able to provide."

- $3,000 will be spent helping local maple syrup producers attract more visitors in the slower spring season. The money will be spent on pamphlets to be handed out at trade shows, providing space on the Chamber's website and marketing Maplefest on radio.

- $4,000 will go towards a half-hour video program on Highlands' fishing and golfing opportunities to be aired in a 12-episode series on TSN next year. "Fins and Skins" will include the specific partner telephone numbers in the credits as well as a position on the Fins and Skins website. Two local businesses will also be contributing funds. The Chamber would have access to the film for its own marketing plans.

- $7,000 will help let people know Haliburton is "the Centre in Central Ontario." This is in partnership with Algonquin Park and Victoria County, with emphasis on the Hwy 35 corridor and the south entrance into the Park to market that area as a destination.

- $3,500 will be spent on seminars and educational opportunities for the local business community. "These opportunities would include providing some financial skills, marketing for export, management skill seminars and the provision of areas to get the information that small to medium businesses require."

- $14,000 will buy space in the province's various event guides and Ontario Discovery Guide for the year 2000.

- $8,500 will allow the Chamber to be represented at at least three trade shows/economic forums and to produce a package that would showcase some Highlands manufacturing businesses "to show potential investors that it can indeed be done in Haliburton County." Several local businesses will also invest in the project.

- $6,000 will be used to upgrade the Chamber's website "to provide economic development information including areas available for development, zoning, lifestyle, employment statistics and testimonials from existing business regarding the advantage of setting up shop in Haliburton County. Currently our website services primarily the tourism market."

Kinmount Fair favourites return, along with "oddball and unusual" events

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

"Oddball and unusual" is how organizer Guy Scott describes the Kinmount Agricultural Fair being held Labour Day weekend.

"You'll never know what you'll find," Scott says about the fair which starts Friday at 9 a.m. and runs until Sunday at 6 p.m.

Some of the more unusual events at this year's fair will be a fishing derby and a demonstration by our region's own "Horse Whisperer" Greg Barrington, scheduled to appear at 4:15 p.m. on Saturday and 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Each day will be scheduled full of events, with the vintage tractor and truck pull and the demolition derby on Friday, and a parade scheduled for noon on Saturday.

The Exhibit Hall, livestock judging, petting zoo and full midway will be just some of the educational opportunities and pure entertainment being offered.

With an 800 seat beer garden and continuous entertainment and dances on Friday and Saturday, closing time on those nights will be "whenever the last people leave" says Scott.

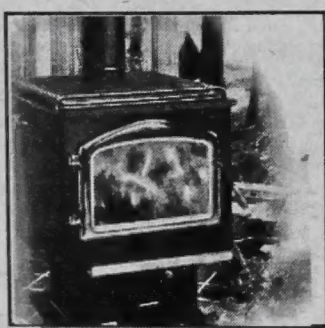

Featured entertainers will be local group "Neon Moon" and the popular "Legends of Country" impersonators performing in the arena.

Trail etiquette needs to be emphasized, canoeists say

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Staff Reporter

Trails and Tours Network hosted an interactive open forum meeting about canoeing recently at Club 35 at Halls Lake. The following are brief reports of items discussed at this meeting.

Stricter enforcement of trail etiquette is the only way to wrangle the 10 per cent of people who abuse local canoeing routes, say many of the forum's attendants.

Vandalism and not packing out were the two major points of contention. Attendants wondered whether the responsibility of catching these abusers should be up to the Ministry of Natural Resources.

But MNR representative David Johnson says that while such enforcement is a possibility, limited manpower is a problem.

There are only four Conservation Officers working in the district. The officers' task lists are "priority driven, so they may not necessarily be available to enforce the rules."

It was suggested that Sir Sandford Fleming College students, who need to put in 80 hours of volunteer time (at the Lindsay campus), be enlisted to help with enforcement.

The majority of the crowd agreed that stopping abusers has to be a full-out effort on everyone's part — "criticize abusers when you see them."

Craig Macdonald, recreation specialist at Algonquin Park, was at the meeting to offer his experience and advice.

"We know what doesn't work," Macdonald said.

Supplying garbage cans is a bad idea, says Macdonald.

"People should carry out their own garbage," rather than the park hauling out entire loads twice weekly. Also, the smell attracts animals, making the garbage bin areas potentially dangerous.

"The focus should be on litter pack up," says Macdonald. "Pack it all in."

Macdonald also noted the trend towards mini propane tanks and of people persistently leaving behind half- or quarter-full cans in the park.

Perhaps these campers figure someone could benefit from the left-over propane, but the fact is no one ever picks up the canisters but the park attendants.

In one month at Algonquin, Macdonald says they found 365 disposable propane containers.

Macdonald says he's found a company to recycle these propane containers and adds that the park will put up signs for campers informing them of a drop-off site.

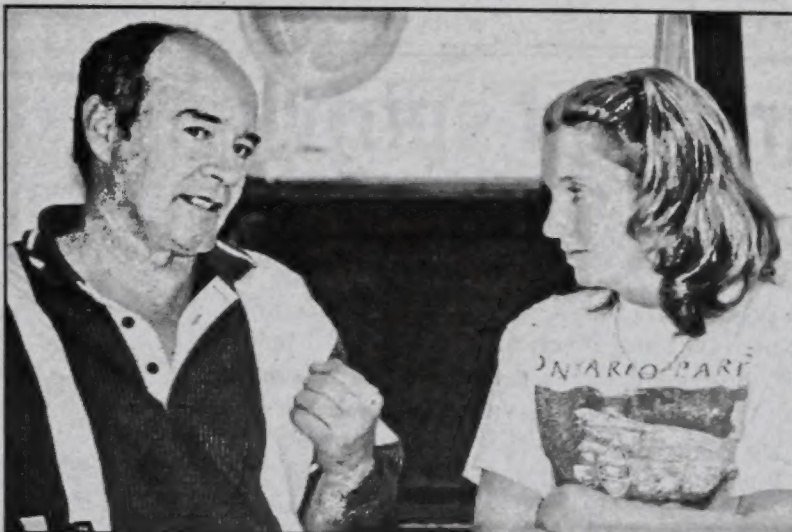

If this doesn't work, the only other alternative, he says, may be to ban the cans.

Privy 911

The Leslie Frost Centre is in need of a new privy system but the question is, who's going to pay for the upgrade?

Existing privies at the camp area are made of metal which has been deteriorating over the years.

"I think the answer is one made of cedar (such as the privies at Algonquin Park)," Macdonald says. "They last, they're porcupine proof but they're

Macdonald estimated each privy to cost about $56. Multiply that by 100.

Since very little money is available from the MNR, replacing the deteriorating privies will be a challenge. It may come down to local fundraising or a possible partnership between MNR and the Trails and Tours Network.

Necessary evil

Since money for crown land projects is scant when it comes to government funding, digging into our own pockets for the sake of pleasure may be the only option left.

The idea of "user pay" for crown land campsites, says canoeist Michael Butz, may be a "necessary evil," but the benefits could prove worthwhile.

"Five dollars a night for a campsite is not outrageous," says Butz, "but it would go a long way in getting things done."

Butz's suggestion was met with mixed reaction, the main rebuttal being "but it's crown land and I pay taxes, so I've already paid enough."

But others, supporting Butz's sentiment, see user fees as a way of controlling the number of people who enter the park, which in the end, may help to keep the area cleaner.

Get in your shells and ride

Getting younger people involved in canoeing is a growing concern for the activity's advocates.

It was noted that the average age of people attending the forum appeared to be 50 years and older.

Exposure to the sport seems to be the main issue.

"We need more people on the lake in canoes," said cottager Slavko Kolar. "Each cottage has at least one, some two (canoes) but they're never near the water, just on the shore. We need to promote canoe use rather than people using those crazy machines."

Some suggested enlisting the local high school to help coach a canoe school or start a competitive canoeing club.

GRAND OPENING

A graceful spirit that will linger

There are people in your life whose influence is not only unsuspected, but much more meaningful than you ever would have expected. Elva Cooper was one such person, touching so many lives in a wonderfully delightful and yet poignant way. Her death last week at age 99 brings much sadness, but also a realization that she'll never really be gone — her presence has become ingrained in the thoughts of far too many people to allow that to happen.

To a host of people she was the Duchess of Guilford, not for any haughty mannerisms but for the quietly unassuming way she could hold court in her kitchen. Without a conscious effort, she could command respect as well affection, drawing people into the warmth of her spirit with a simple smile or that mischievous twinkle in her eye. Once that twinkle caught you, you were hooked. To quite a few others, she was Grandma Cooper or Aunt Elva. (When you consider she was born a Sisson and married into the Cooper clan, there weren't many people in the village she wasn't related to in one way or another.) To others she was a constant friend, someone who you simply assumed would always be there. Having lived so long, you thought she could live forever.

She never asked for or expected the attention and adoration she received. She was one of those genuinely nice people — someone who didn't have to think of what was the best thing to do or say. She did it naturally. By her graceful spirit, she made others want to attain grace. Because she was such a good person, you wanted to be good — or at least better than you were when not in her presence!

Without preaching or lecturing, she was also an exceptionally good teacher. This pertains more to women than to men, but she taught you that to be strong, you didn't need to be arrogant. A slight, dainty woman — was she even five feet tall? — she was the epitome of kindness and love but had at her core a remarkable strength. Perhaps that came from her childhood. Her father died when Elva was young, leaving her mother to cope on her own. There was no money, and Elva's struggles were compounded by polio.

Yet in this feminist age, she could only listen with bewilderment to stories about "empowerment." As a young woman, she was a cook in lumber and hunting camps, often the only woman alone in the bush with a group of men. Not once did she have any trouble. Why? She said she acted like a woman and expected the men to treat her as one — with respect and civility. And they did. Yet for those who think that meant she gave up any sense of herself as an individual, she told the story of the first time she voted. It was after World War I, a time she spent working in a munitions factory in Lindsay. The franchise had just been extended to women and she wanted to exercise it. But her husband, Stan, was dead set against it. He forbade her to vote. Elva forbade him to forbid her. She enlisted the help of her father-in-law, who was unable to get to the poll and asked her to cast his vote while she was at it. The chill in the Cooper household lasted a day or two. It's funny, then, that for the several years she was a widow, she always went by Mrs. Stanley Cooper in the phonebook. He was a part of her identity and she felt a better person because of it.

While we mourn her loss, we should all feel grateful that we could enjoy her presence for so long. Peace to her soul... and blessings in our lives.

County needs to mend fences

To the Editor:

This is really an open letter to the County of Haliburton.

I noticed in a recent news item that the county had given generous financial grants totalling $68,000 for the overall promotion of the county.

It is my hope that you will pardon me if my applause for the giveaway is muted. My applause is muted for the simple reason that I believe the county could use some of its wealth to mend fences closer to home.

When I suggest the county mend fences I am speaking literally, not figuratively.

Most of my day, in which I read that particular news item, was spent rounding up cattle which had broken through the poorly maintained fence of the former CNR railway line. After rounding up the cattle, I had to repair the fence when other necessary farm work was crying to be done. I believe the county has a moral obligation to maintain that fence or see that it is maintained.

To go back some years...

When the CNR ceased to use the rail line, I approached my Member of Parliament asking that the right-of-way which crosses our farm should be returned to the farm. As you can imagine, I did not get a very sympathetic hearing. My MP had heard the siren song of vacationers' dollars and, when that song is being listened to, all ears are deaf to the plea of fairness and justice.

My grandfather sold land to the railway for only one dollar because he believed the railway would be a boon to development. If he could have foreseen the day when that abandoned rail line would be a curse to his heirs he might have acted more wisely with the insistence that the bill of sale contain a clause obligating the railway to return the land if the railway ceased to function.

It was, of course, taken for granted that the railway would build and maintain fences along the right-of-way. Who inherits that obligation to maintain fences is no doubt a matter that lawyers could argue over until doomsday.

While the legal niceties could be a matter of endless dispute, the moral obligation is much more straight forward, and that moral obligation is quite simple — whoever owns that right-of-way should be responsible for maintaining fences where the right-of-way crosses farm property where fences are needed. In the case of our farm, that means about two-and-a-half miles of fence.

There are unemployed persons in the county who would benefit from the employment of rebuilding that fence. I have done considerable patching, but much of the fence is in bad shape.

Suppose the county accepts what I call a moral obligation to build and maintain fences — local businesses which sell fence supplies would profit; local persons who are employed would profit. And, while I don't suppose anyone is concerned that farm work is hard with not much financial return, for the county to accept responsibility would relieve me of a burden that I should not have to carry. If the right-of-way had been returned to the farm as it should have been, the fencing nightmare would be non-existent.

Happy new year

I don't know if you are anything like me but I always feel that the real beginning of the year is in September when school starts up again. For some reason I always feel that it signifies monumental change far more than midnight December 31.

Even as a kid, I remember waking up on January 1st and waiting to have some sort of different feeling come over me. After all, there had been so much talk about the new year, New Year's resolutions, "what are you are you going to do in the New Year?". When the day finally dawned, I didn't feel one whit different, except perhaps in later years, sometimes a little hung over. I felt like there had been a huge build up for nothing.

Now the beginning of the school year was something to get excited, tense, slightly sick and resigned about. The build-up would start a couple of weeks before Labour Day as the slow days of summer took on a different face. There were comments like, "Do you need new shoes for school this year?" and "I hope you can squeeze into the jacket one more year" that sounded the death knell on summer. In grade school I remember late August going into what I now think of the frantic playing mode, where you and your friends get up at the crack of dawn and play until it was well after dark, trying to wrench those last precious hours of freedom out of the day.

Then the calls among girl friends would start, "What are you wearing?", "Who do you think we'll get for a teacher?", "I hear Mr. Hutt is really strict". These calls pretty much served one purpose, to get my stomach in a permanently nervous state. It didn't matter that these were pretty much all of the same kids I had left in June and had seen a good many of them over the summer, or that we usually only had one class per grade and the teachers seldom, if ever changed. There was just something unnerving about going to school on that first day and thinking of it for weeks prior only prolonged the agony.

By the time the Jerry Lewis Telethon was winding down at 6:00 pm Labour Day, I was pretty much resigned and feeling quite ill. My mother always said nobody ever wanted to miss the first day of school but I was willing to be a trend setter. Sleep was pretty much impossible as the butterflies whirring in my stomach droned louder than the Blitz of London.

Getting up and getting ready was a laborious task that involved getting perfect hair, a great lunch and knee socks that would stay up all day, none of which co-operated. I remember comparing the walk to school like walking the plank, waiting for some dweeb like Frank Gervais to jump out of the bushes and scare me, making me drop my lunch and muss my hair. By the time I arrived at the school yard, not too late, not too early, everyone else was starting to gather and it was starting to seem like old times. Mr. O'Reilly in his red polyester checked jacket walking the beat, Madame Gauthier, the french teacher with the greatest nail polish, and Mrs. Bray, the school institution and grade eight teacher. All the girls were there, Kealey, Jo, Patti, The Karens (Lynch, Izzard and Phalen) and of course, the Boys - Edward Whalen, Forrester, and my heart's desire John Fournier. By lunch time we were all pretty much into how tough school really was summer was a lifetime ago.

There were of course, worse first days than others. Like the time it rained on the way to school and the new bra I had received over the summer shone like a beacon in a storm. The first day of high school was enough to give me an ulcer. I had to take three city buses to get downtown and I was so afraid of being late, I left at 7:20 am arriving at school a full hour and twenty minutes before anyone else. Talk about a keener! The first day of college was completely nerve-wracking because I was totally out of my element - I didn't know a soul. I remember saying to one person who I found myself standing beside, "Hi, what is your name?". She turned to me a laughed a very throaty, cosmopolitan laugh and said, "Honey, this isn't kindergarten." I think I felt more mortified than when I had the wet bra.

Anyhow, next week I will be celebrating New Year's on Tuesday. I will send my kids off after a whole night of listening to them complain that they are too nervous to sleep, that they are scared to death of their teachers and they really wish they were anywhere but here. When they get out of the car at school, I know that they will be embarking on a whole new year of adventures, trials, tribulations, learning and I hope challenges, decision making and learning. The world is their oyster on the brink of this new year and mine as well, for I have some things I hope to accomplish as well. Happy New Year everyone.

The greatest anniversary: Sept. 1, 1939

by GRACE BOICE (born during W.W. I)

BECAUSE, I suppose, this is the last year of the twentieth century, there has been in the media, much reminiscing about times past - particularly about anniversaries. Man reached the moon 30 years ago, World War I ended a little under 80 years ago, Alcott and Brown made the first transatlantic flight in July 1919, also 80 years ago, the great Depression began to affect the world 70 years ago, and on September 1, exactly 60 years ago, the German army invaded Poland and World War II began - and the world has forever changed.

For what I will call the Great War generation - those born between 1905 and 1925, the effect was immediate in Europe and in Canada. Later, of course, it would encompass the Orient, Asia, Africa, and the United States and South America. Suddenly, here in Canada, those who were in dead-end depression jobs saw a way out - they could "join up". For the unemployed, not only could they find work, they could find self-esteem in enlisting to fight against tyranny. Some could find a way out of an unhappy marriage, others saw it as a chance for excitement and escape from the boredom of humdrum small-town lives. Even today, in any Legion you will find veterans reliving the most significant years of their lives - the war years, and enjoying the perks and pensions given to them by a grateful government.

For others the war meant a disruption of hopes and dreams. Marriages were postponed, or entered into too hurriedly. Careers were put on hold. Education was interrupted, and when the war fatalities began to be published, the grief and desolation of those near and dear to the victims were not to be assuaged. Many a young woman lost the lover who was to be her husband and the father of her children. Many a veteran came home disillusioned and cynical to find that his wife or fiancée had grown tired of waiting for him, and that instead of being the knight in shining armour, he had been the perpetrator in, or spectator of, unspeakable horrors and debaucheries.

Even for those who were not directly associated with the armed forces, the war brought tremendous upheaval. Food was rationed as was gasoline. Travel was restricted, new cars were off the market. Ordinary things like bobby pins or elastic or nylons were unobtainable. And old inhibitions were cast aside: "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die." If being 'merry' meant extra-marital sex and promiscuity, well so be it.

In Canada we missed the horrors of being invaded, or the privations of the British, but our lives were changed forever. By the war's end our old standards were gone, our idealistic hopes for the world were shaken, our belief in the orderly progress of civilization was shattered. We became inured to violence, condoned promiscuity and accepted the unscrupulous.

So, in this year of our Lord 1999, if you ask anyone in his seventies or eighties what anniversary was of greatest significance to the world and to his or her personal life, undoubtedly the answer would be "September 1, 1939, exactly sixty years ago when Hitler invaded Poland." And the world as we knew it crumbled.

Haliburton Hospital proves good things come in small packages

To the Editor:

I would like to send this letter to the staff of the Haliburton Hospital. It is a letter of heartfelt thanks and a sincere apology.

Let me explain.

I live in the town of Markham just a block north of the Scarborough border. My in-laws have a cottage on Lake Wenona and this summer, my husband and I and our five-month-old son decided to take a week vacation there.

When we were there, our son became sick and being our first child, threw us into utter panic. Not sure what to do and with his fever above 100°, I questioned if the hospital here would be as good as our "City" hospital. Not trusting the hospital here, I called my family doctor and thought about rushing home. As his instructions seemed vague and my nerves unsettled, my husband urged me to call the Haliburton Hospital to at least ease my mind. The call was in the wee hours of the morning but the nurse who answered was helpful but most of all friendly and reassuring.

The following day, we brought our son into the hospital as his fever had still not come down. The nurse who greeted us was extremely helpful and did not make us feel (for lack of a better word) silly for being so worried.

The doctor who treated him was informative, never once telling me I shouldn't have worried and was so reassuring that I left there feeling like I finally knew what was happening to my baby. He answered all of my questions so that I fully understood what he meant and reassured us that we did and were doing the right things. As first time parents, little things set your whole world spinning but when someone takes the time to tell you what to do and that what you're doing is right...well it makes all the difference. I wish I had kept that doctor's name but I would like to thank all of the staff at your hospital.

Now I would also like to apologize for not trusting that they would be a great hospital. When we returned to the cottage I realized that if this had happened in the city, we would have just been told to "Sit down, the doctor will be right here." I realized that day that bigger is not really better. I know that we would not have been treated even half as professionally or more important personally if we were in Markham.

Words cannot express my gratitude to the doctors and nurses on staff at the hospital but I would like for them to know that they are making a great difference to the community that they live in but most of all to us who come to visit once in awhile.

Double crossing of Kashagawigamog proves Karen is a real winner

To the Editor:

Eleven-year-old Karen Cox-Gurdon emerged from the water a winner, having accomplished what she set out to do, a double crossing of Lake Kashagawigamog to raise funds for the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

Shortly after 9 on Tuesday, Karen shed her warm-up clothes, applied Vaseline on her arms and legs to keep herself warm, acknowledged the spectators and smiled for pictures. Karen appeared confident, motivated and well trained.

From the dock, we could see Karen using various strokes and could hear her voice as she communicated with her grandmother who was in one of the pedal boats keeping Karen on course. Her grandfather was in the rowboat.

In less than 39 minutes, Karen inspired the handful of people who were fortunate to share in and witness her success. Karen Cox-Gurdon is a winner for completing the double crossing of Lake Kashagawigamog and a winner for having the conviction and courage to attempt the feat.

Pregnant mice have craving for pickles too, a bemused cottager discovers

To the Editor:

I now have a follow-up to our mouse story. A couple years ago we were having trouble catching mice. This year, so far, we've caught 41!

We've even discovered that it's not only human pregnant women who crave pickles. Running out of cheese, I set the trap using a bread and butter pickle, and we caught a pregnant mouse!

We solved the mystery of the disappearing ant traps! Since we saw a lot of ants on and around our stone fireplace, we placed an ant trap on the mantle. The cottage was quiet and I heard a tinny, scratchy sound and investigated. There was a mouse with big round ears tugging on the little tin, pulling it towards the wood facing (which conceals their entrance point, I'm sure). I pushed the tin further away a couple times and the mouse tugged it back. I gave up and went to bed and in the morning the trap was gone. It was behind the facing and had to be turned on edge to remove it. Smart mouse!

Kindness and prayers after accident appreciated

To the Editor:

We want to thank the people of The Echo for their kindness and care for us after the accident last Monday. We also thank the Lord for all the people praying for us and for the man that was so hurt.

The policeman asked if we had an airbag. I said no, but we had a prayer pillow around us. For the man in the truck, we are sorry for causing him so much trouble.

Monmouth's volunteer firefighters were quickly on the scene but given the constant source of fuel for the fire, were unable to contain the flames. They concentrated on making sure the fire did not spread very far into the forest on the side of the highway.

Dysart and Glamorgan firefighters were also called to help, bringing extra tanker trucks.

Ontario Hydro was able to redirect the electricity so that Haliburton village's power came back on within the hour. Areas closer to the accident are expected to be without power for 24 hours.

The Echo would like to thank Stephen and Stephanie Hartwick, who lent us their camera and some film when The Echo ran out of its own film.

Haliburton Hospital proves good things come in small packages

To the Editor:

I would like to send this letter to the staff of the Haliburton Hospital. It is a letter of heartfelt thanks and a sincere apology.

Let me explain.

I live in the town of Markham just a block north of the Scarborough border. My in-laws have a cottage on Lake Wenona and this summer, my husband and I and our five-month-old son decided to take a week vacation there.

When we were there, our son became sick and being our first child, threw us into utter panic. Not sure what to do and with his fever above 100°, I questioned if the hospital here would be as good as our "City" hospital. Not trusting the hospital here, I called my family doctor and thought about rushing home. As his instructions seemed vague and my nerves unsettled, my husband urged me to call the Haliburton Hospital to at least ease my mind. The call was in the wee hours of the morning but the nurse who answered was helpful but most of all friendly and reassuring.

The following day, we brought our son into the hospital as his fever had still not come down. The nurse who greeted us was extremely helpful and did not make us feel (for lack of a better word) silly for being so worried.

The doctor who treated him was informative, never once telling me I shouldn't have worried and was so reassuring that I left there feeling like I finally knew what was happening to my baby. He answered all of my questions so that I fully understood what he meant and reassured us that we did and were doing the right things. As first time parents, little things set your whole world spinning but when someone takes the time to tell you what to do and that what you're doing is right...well it makes all the difference. I wish I had kept that doctor's name but I would like to thank all of the staff at your hospital.

Now I would also like to apologize for not trusting that they would be a great hospital. When we returned to the cottage I realized that if this had happened in the city, we would have just been told to "Sit down, the doctor will be right here." I realized that day that bigger is not really better. I know that we would not have been treated even half as professionally or more important personally if we were in Markham.

Words cannot express my gratitude to the doctors and nurses on staff at the hospital but I would like for them to know that they are making a great difference to the community that they live in but most of all to us who come to visit once in awhile.

Double crossing of Kashagawigamog proves Karen is a real winner

To the Editor:

Eleven-year-old Karen Cox-Gurdon emerged from the water a winner, having accomplished what she set out to do, a double crossing of Lake Kashagawigamog to raise funds for the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

Shortly after 9 on Tuesday, Karen shed her warm-up clothes, applied Vaseline on her arms and legs to keep herself warm, acknowledged the spectators and smiled for pictures. Karen appeared confident, motivated and well trained.

From the dock, we could see Karen using various strokes and could hear her voice as she communicated with her grandmother who was in one of the pedal boats keeping Karen on course. Her grandfather was in the rowboat.

In less than 39 minutes, Karen inspired the handful of people who were fortunate to share in and witness her success. Karen Cox-Gurdon is a winner for completing the double crossing of Lake Kashagawigamog and a winner for having the conviction and courage to attempt the feat.

Pregnant mice have craving for pickles too, a bemused cottager discovers

To the Editor:

I now have a follow-up to our mouse story. A couple years ago we were having trouble catching mice. This year, so far, we've caught 41!

We've even discovered that it's not only human pregnant women who crave pickles. Running out of cheese, I set the trap using a bread and butter pickle, and we caught a pregnant mouse!

We solved the mystery of the disappearing ant traps! Since we saw a lot of ants on and around our stone fireplace, we placed an ant trap on the mantle. The cottage was quiet and I heard a tiny, scratchy sound and investigated. There was a mouse with big round ears tugging on the little tin, pulling it towards the

Kash dashers find rainbow at run's end

A thirty-minute downpour drenched racers at this month's second annual Kash Dash. But a double rainbow at the end of the storm may have been just the inspiration runners needed to kick it to the finish line. Which they did.

"All runners who crossed the finish line said they enjoyed the run, maybe even more so with the rain," said event organizer, Dr. Steve Ferricuti.

One hundred and thirty racers (31 more than last year) competed at this month's charity race, raising funds for the Canadian Physicians for Aid and Relief organization.

Ferricuti said the racers drew in about $2,500 for the organization.

The following are the results of Kash Dash '99:

Blake Paton finds support, motivation in local athletic community

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Staff Reporter

A combination of genes, friends and coincidence help explain what possesses Haliburton's Blake Paton to do seemingly unforgivable things to his body.

Exhibit A. Paton raced Stanhope's Sprint Triathlon (750

m swim, 20 km bike, 5 km run) Saturday morning, finishing an impressive second in a pool of stellar competition. Eight hours later, Paton dons his running shoes again to run a 10 km charity race called the "Kash Dash" at Lake Kashagawigamog.

Records show that the 35-year-old has a history of this kind of behaviour.

AFTER THE RACE:

Blake Paton and Peter Oylar pick apart their racing strategies after the Stanhope Triathlon. Paton finished a minute behind Oylar's first-place overall but led the pack in his own age group.

Exhibit B: Last winter, Paton, an avid cross country skier, competed in Canada's biggest ski race, the Keskinada Loppet in Hull, Quebec — twice. There were two 50 km races that he wanted to enter so rather than choose just one, Paton opted to ski both the classic and the skate race over two consecutive days.

"It was just a bit of a challenge that I set for myself," says the modest Grades 4,5 and 6 teacher at Gooderham Elementary School.

"If I don't set little goals for myself then I don't have the reason, or as much of a reason, to exercise every day."

Paton says the reason he did both races last weekend was just a matter of timing.

"The reason I did them both was because they happened to be on the same day," he explains.

"I try to do the local events when I can because I like to do them and support the people who organize them."

Growing up in New Brunswick, Paton was exposed to plenty of good example by two parents who emphasized the importance of health and fitness.

Blake's father, a retired physical education professor at the University of New Brunswick and his mother, a full-time phys-ed teacher before Blake was born, often participated in various races themselves and encouraged their children to do the same.

"We were lucky because when I was a kid, she worked at a local ski resort in New Brunswick," says Paton of his mother after her teaching career. "We were always there — it was sort of like our day care centre."

Paton also credits much of his motivation to his workout partners in the area. Together, the group has established a team, The Haliburton Harriers, which is making a name for itself within the community and beyond.

"All the credit goes to the people I work out with," says Paton.

"It wouldn't be as easy for me to keep up with the training if it weren't for the large (proportionately speaking), active community here," says Paton.

He notes that since he and his wife Jennifer (who also competes in various running races), moved to Haliburton nine years ago, the sporting community appears to have grown.

"It's nice and friendly," he adds.

"When you get to my age, the thing about training is that if the training isn't fun, it's hard to get into top shape. So as far as training goes, it's a real mixture of what the other guys are available to do."

Paton and his partners either run or bike every day with the runs lasting just under an hour and the rides tallying an average of 100 km per day.

But Paton is not the type of athlete to look down upon people who can't go as hard or as fast or as long.

"The people who I really get motivation from are those who didn't grow up with it," he says, "or those that got out of shape, because of an injury or whatever, and work really hard to get back into shape."

As far as diet goes, Paton says he's not real persnickety about what goes into his body, unlike some athletes.

"I just eat a healthy diet, and some chips," he says, laughing.

"When you're really active, you don't have to watch calorie intake."

CHANGING GEARS:

Having finished the swim and bike, Paton prepares for the next and last leg of the race — the run.

Hockey pro helps golf team net first place finish

Golfing a 14 under par 57, the winning foursome at Pinestone-Rotary golf tournament included a cottaging sports celebrity.

Centre for the San Jose Sharks, Mike Ricci played the 18-hole course with teammates John Legros, Bob Park, and Dave MacGowan to claim the leading score at the best ball tournament. Ricci is brother-in-law to Legros.

The sixth annual charity tournament hosted at Pinestone and jointly sponsored by the Inn and the Rotary Club, raised over $19,000 for the Haliburton Highlands Health Foundation.

While none of the golfers shot a hole-in-one, (leaving the trips to Scotland and the Bahamas unclaimed), Park said his team couldn't have had a better day.

"It was fantastic," says Park. "We couldn't do anything wrong."

The following are the results of the PineStone Golf tournament:

First: Bob Park, Dave MacGowan, John Legros, Miki Ricci.

Second: Dan Collins, Justin Collins, Bob Boyko, Ron Boyko.

Mixed:

First: Jason Glecoff, Clay Glecoff, Phil Glecoff, Sandra Glecoff.

Second: Bill McClean, Vesta McClean, Hitch Hitchcock, Harry Southworth.

Starting an exercise program is easy

It's as easy as going for a walk for 20 minutes a day, or start with 10 and work up to 20, add some biking in there, maybe some skating if you are up to the challenge. People tend to think of exercise as sitting on the stationary bike for 20 minutes or the Stairmaster but it doesn't have to be like that - do what you enjoy! You must have some fun with exercising or you will not stick with it. Find something you enjoy, start out slow and increase as you feel comfortable. You can buy a videotape at the store and follow that if you enjoy aerobics or boxing - just make sure it is a beginner's tape and start slowly.

Personal Trainer

As you increase your cardiovascular activity, you can add in things like abdominal exercises and upper body and lower body exercises. Always stretch after you have warmed up for five minutes and after your workouts to prevent sore muscles.

Good luck, and get started today, not tomorrow.

Hostelling

for the young (at heart)

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

Deep in the woods in Haliburton Forest, nine women sit breathlessly on a fallen log. Heads tilted back, they are staring quietly and intently on the lone figure precariously attached to the middle of a daunting rock face.

Helen Flaherty, 69, is wearing knee pads and a helmet. In her purple shorts and white t-shirt she is the only spot of colour on the dark mossy rock face and all eyes are on her. The area she is climbing will prove to be the turning back point for several of the women here, which is about halfway up the straight vertical rock face where all points of grabbing hold disappear and the rest of the way up is a smooth surface of granite, seemingly devoid of any hand or footholds.

The women, ranging in age from 55 to 81, are rock climbing, and are having the time of their lives, in the prime of their lives.

This is an Elderhostel program, and rock climbing is only part of the adventures they will be having this week.

Elderhostel Canada works with educational institutions and residential facilities to provide educational and recreational opportunities for adults. This particular program is at Haliburton Forest, but there are other programs in Ontario and the rest of Canada.

Free from jobs and raising families, this is a hardy bunch. They are in varying degrees of fitness and age. These are not the type of women content to sit at home alone or go on coach tours. Most say they prefer the Elderhostel programs for the educational aspects, and in fact the fees for the programs are referred to as tuition.

The programs are open to men and women, and it is just a coincidence that in this particular session there are all women. The week previous there were 37 people attending the Haliburton Forest program, including eight couples.

One gets the feeling though, that these women are quite content with the way things worked out, and in fact might prefer it this way, considering the sisterhood of support that is flowing out to the climbers.

Lina Braden from Toronto, who declined to give her age, says that the description for the program stated that it was "active", "which is why you don't see any men here", to which the group explodes in laughter.

Indeed, laughter and comradeship is a huge part of why people choose to go on an Elderhostel program.

David Bishop, who educates the groups in the Wolf Centre with lectures about wolves and humans, stories and myths, says that there is a preponderance of women in the programs.

Whether they are single, widowed, or just leaving their husband at home is undetermined, but it is clear that not having men around is not impeding the fun that this particular group is having.

Rick Whittaker is the instructor for this rock climbing venture, and he is patient and understanding, full of assurances and encouragement, pushing, sometimes literally, the women to reach their highest point on the rock face.

Whittaker climbs up to the lowest starting point to help Helen Flaherty while she negotiates a particularly slippery and awkward spot. She is crunching down on one leg while trying to reach up and out with the other, finally catching the foothold she was looking for but not having the power to pull up from such an awkward position, so with a little nudge she is up and standing and negotiates the rest of the climb herself.

Anne Smith attempts the climb after Helen. There are ooh's and ah's of the agility she possesses at age 59. Whittaker comments that she has the classic build of a climber, Helen interjects and says, "yeah, all muscle and no fat, unlike me with the opposite!", eliciting more laughter from the group.

About half way up the rock face, Anne says she wants to come down. Impressed with her innate abilities, Whittaker encourages Anne to continue, saying that of course she can come down now, but that it would be really great if she just gave it a little more, went a little higher.

Anne makes it, and the log-sitting crowd erupts in applause and yells of a job well done. Anne celebrates her victory over the rock by gleefully swinging down from her high perch on the attached rope, rappelling down the rock face, smiling and laughing while the group applauds and celebrates with her.

Later in the morning, Barb Lambie, gives it a try. The nervousness is apparent but not a deterrent, and after her friend reminds her to take off her glasses, then reminds her again to put on the helmet, off and up she goes, reaching again to that stubborn midway point that a few reach but choose to not go beyond. Previous climbers yell out where to next put her foot and hands, but satisfied with her attempt, Barb returns to her spot on the log, successful, at age 64, of being able to say that rock climbing is now a part of her accomplishments.

Eunice Kimmerly will turn 81 next week, never married; she is here accompanied by her friend Dyliss Clark, 75, who says they have been friends since they met in 1960, when they lived close to each other in Chatham. They met through their common interest in down hill skiing, which they still do together.

Eunice now lives in Dresden, and Dyliss in Kitchener, but they have accompanied each other on six different Elderhostel programs, including one of their favourites which was to see the polar bears in Churchill Manitoba.

Many of the hostellers believe that this is the best way to travel and learn. They say the programs are very well run and that the type of offerings available are hard to find with any travel agent.

The food is basic and the accommodations can be sparse, but these factors are not deterrents for the likes of Helen Flaherty, of the purple shorts, age 69 from Newburyport, Massachusetts. Helen estimates that this is her thirtieth Elderhostel program, within a time frame of only four years. That would almost make her a full time hosteller.

This is her ninth course this year alone. She has chosen this program for one reason. Having failed in a previous rock climbing attempt in Colorado earlier this year, she was determined to try again, and succeed, and she has.

Among some of the other hostelling adventures Helen has taken this year alone are cross country skiing in Maine and northern Vermont, two trips to Arizona for hiking, white water rafting in Colorado, and a week in June also in Colorado, meeting up with the same people every year, for singing, card playing, and a sense of continuance, meeting old friends, checking in once a year.

Diane Lawrence, the youngest person of the group at 55, drove from Albany, New York for this adventure. Her main interest was in the Wolf Center, and says so far seeing and learning about the wolves has been the highlight for her. Diane was supposed to be accompanied by her friend Joan Atkinson, 66, but Joan was killed in a car accident two months previous, and Diane's decision to come alone will help in her grieving by making new friends and moving forward.

This is Diane's second Elderhostel program; on the first she went backpacking in the Grand Canyon. Others in the group rib her about barely making the age requirement, and 'squeaking in' at 55.

Another literal high point for the group is the forest canopy tour, with a 1/2 kilometer walk and lecture 70 feet above the ground in the trees.

After the rock climbing, the group will head off on an overnight camping trip in the canoes, with a special treat in the evening. They are taking along their own masseuse, provided for the group as part of the program, and everyone will receive a massage on the beach as the sun sets. A rewarding ending after a physically challenging day, well deserved for this particular group of adventurers, who redefine the preconceived limitations of age.

For many of the people in the Elderhostel program, the dues to this exclusive club have been paid, with decades of working, loss, love and success.

For some of us, the wait to get in is still years away, but it gives us all something to look forward to.

Community support sought for legal clinic

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

The desire to communicate an urgent and imminent need to both the community and Legal Aid Ontario for a legal clinic in Haliburton and Victoria Counties was the topic of discussion at a meeting in Minden on Wednesday night.

How exactly to go about doing this was the subject of some heated discussions amongst the group of 11 people, made up of volunteers and members of the community.

They say the need for a legal clinic in the area is clear, but how to seek additional community support, demonstrate to the government that there is a need, fine tune the proposal to the type of need, and get all this done before the September 3 deadline are the problems facing the committee.

"The intent of a clinic is generally to provide legal assistance to those unable to get adequate service in other ways," says Fay Martin, executive director of Family Services of Haliburton County. "Staff - a salaried lawyer with clerical or paralegal support - would give people advice on legal matters and refer them to appropriate resources, whether applying for legal aid, preparing to represent themselves in court, finding a lawyer with appropriate expertise, finding a lawyer who will accept payment through legal aid, finding and completing the right forms, etc., etc."

County wants more information before endorsing clinic

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

County council wants more information about the need for a legal clinic before it will write a letter in support of one.

"I have never heard of anyone who didn't get service," said Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey following a presentation by Minden lawyer Carolynn Coburn at Wednesday's council meeting. "If it's so clear cut there's a lack of service, we'd automatically get (a clinic)... Surely lobbying isn't the way you get justice."

Fearrey says local lawyers often provide guidance and information for free when they know people don't have the money to pay for their services. "I understand there's a lot of generosity."

As well, Fearrey worried that a legal clinic would be the first step towards a legal aid clinic. Citing concerns about the costs of such a venture, he said that even if it's paid for through the province, "there's only one taxpayer."

"The legal staff would work closely with social services to help solve related, non-legal issues. The service the clinic offers should add to rather than compete with services currently available from private lawyers."

Everyone at the meeting agreed that the initial proposal needed to be strengthened, and much of the discussion was based on the desire to emphasize family law, citing that there were virtually no Haliburton lawyers available for this branch of the law.

A suggestion was given that perhaps local lawyers could co-operate by accepting legal aid certificates, or to get the legal aid office and the proposed clinic to work together, that 'dovetailing' the two systems might be a solution.

The focus on establishing the general foundations of a legal clinic was then agreed upon, in that no one branch of the law was more important than the other, and that the strategy was "let's get this program established" before the fine tuning of its operation was discussed.

The need for legal aid with poverty laws, encompassing welfare, landlord/tenant, housing tribunals and worker's compensation was expressed, along with family and criminal law.

In light of government cutbacks, the first step agreed upon was to try to establish an urgent and imminent need for legal services in the county.

To this end, discussions turned to educating the citizens in what their rights are, and to encourage them to outwardly support a legal assistance clinic in the area.

There was concern expressed about the low literacy rate in the county, and that a certain grade level is needed to even understand the literature that is currently available; just handing out pamphlets is just not enough.

It was said that people who might choose not to hire council should have the opportunity to be prepared before they show up in front of a judge. This way they will be versed in the likely proceedings, and most importantly what their rights are.

The committee must show that they are capable and willing to help run a legal clinic and to be able to show community support and urgent need.

It was suggested that in the process of submitting a proposal for a legal clinic, the geographic area needs to be considered. The vastness of the area suggests the proposal contain the necessity of being a special interest area, possibly eliciting the result of a pilot project addressing the area's unique situation.

Haliburton and Victoria Counties are already on the list of under-served areas acknowledged by Legal Aid Ontario. The onus has been put on the community itself to show by letters of support that a legal clinic is wanted, and by the Committee of volunteers to prove that they are able and willing to run such a clinic.

The next meeting is Sept. 1 in Lindsay at the Winchester Arms at 7:30 p.m..

For love of province:

■ Students spend their summer making sure Ontario remains an environmentally-friendly place to live

DIANA ZLOMISLIC
Staff Reporter

Fifty years ago, seventeen and eighteen-year olds packed muskets to show they were patriotic, strong and free. Today, one of the noblest things teens can do (and are doing) for their country, er province, is to pack an environmentally-friendly lunch and haul logs for minimum wage.

That's the story for a group of Haliburton teens who've spent the last two months engaging in memorable labour in and around Haliburton.

Five teens (plus one supervisor who's still in university) are part of a pilot project operating through the Ministry of Natural Resources. Collectively called the Ontario Stewardship Rangers, the group travels five days a week from worksite to worksite, as determined by the various county council stewardship committees who contract the youths' services.

Last week, the Stewardship Rangers drove the finishing nails into a boardwalk project at Snowdon Park.

Hoisting five foot-long planks of wood over a shoulder, each worker descends into the bush for a half-mile walk until they can unload the lumber at it's point of destination.

Back and forth, back and forth until lunch break. And then back and forth again until they've created a walkable boardwalk to shield the soft sucking soil underneath.

The Rangers' agenda at Snowdon Park was to create two, thirty-foot-long boardwalks along the area's trails.

"For the first boardwalk," says Ranger Jesse Loughheed, 17, "we had to rip out an old one that had taken 15 people a week to do."

"It just shows how superhuman we really are," quips Daniel Morgan, 17.

Aside from hauling logs, Morgan and his co-workers have spent the last two months (since July 5) digging drainage culverts along the ski trails at Glebe Park, and recovering wooden wild-life cut-outs from muddy waters at the Leslie Frost Centre.

"We've gone through every terrain imaginable," says Loughheed, "— especially swamp."

Retrieving the wooden silhouettes at the Frost Centre made for an especially memorable experience. "There were more weeds than I can imagine," says Loughheed.

"We waded through it in bathing suits and sandals," adds Lindsey Robertson, 16. "It was kind of like wading through sewage."

Fortunately youth and hindsight has a way of turning confrontations with crusty bogs into marks of honour.

"It's a really good experience," says Loughheed.

But good enough to return for another summer of the same next year?

OPP provides updates on fatal accidents

On August 23, the OPP investigated a two-vehicle fatal collision on Highway 35, south of Minden.

Involved were driver Chris Thompson, age 17 years from Lindsay, and his father, Steven Thompson, age 39 years, who was a passenger in the 1992 Camray travelling northbound on Highway 35.

Steven Thompson was killed when the Camry hit the east shoulder, then travelled westbound crossing centre lane, when it was struck by a southbound vehicle.

Allan Johnson, age 63 years of Minden, was the lone driver travelling southbound in a 1998 Nissan Pathfinder. Both he and Chris Thompson were treated and released from Minden Hospital.

Kennisis Lake drowning

Few details are known about the drowning of a 16-year-old Whitby boy on Kennisis Lake August 21. The post-mortem's results "indicated that drowning was the cause of death."

It was not said whether Ryan Haber struck his head when he fell out of an aluminum boat in rough waters. He was conscious at first, able to call out for help, but he had gone under the surface and disappeared by the time a passing boat was able to get to the scene.

The eagle sculpture has landed

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

The morning dawned clear and bright, perfect for the first flight of the magnificent new eagle sculpture that was installed, appropriately, in Eagle Lake.

This is the seventh installation of sculpture in the Haliburton County visual arts initiative.

As part of the Haliburton County Development Corporation (HCDC) and Human Resources Development Canada, the project was conceived by the HCDC Arts Committee, which has a mandate to raise awareness of the visual arts in Haliburton County.

The eagle itself was designed and produced by Sergio Zrinscak and Leo Sepa and was executed in steel. It is accompanied by two smaller 30 inch cut out baby eagles. The large sculpture is not about to actually take flight any time soon. Weighing in at approximately 250 pounds and anchored in solid dolomite rock, the sculpture should remain a fixture on the curved Sir Sam's Sculpture sure to draw flocks to Lake:

Designed and produced by Sergio Zrinscak and Leo Sepa (above), the 250lb steel eagle will be accompanied by two smaller cut out eaglets.

Road in Eagle Lake for many years to come.

Constructed of quarter inch steel plate, the bird's wing span is approximately 10 feet. The body of the bird has been intentionally rusted by spraying it with salt water and letting it remain for 24 hours. With just enough rust to add texture and colour to the body, it makes the polished and sealed silver head, tail feathers and talons, all the more prominent.

The project was a community effort, with local residents contributing to the choice of sculpture and design. Bolenders Ltd. of Eagle Lake contributed and delivered to the site the dolomite rocks that the sculpture is mounted on. Miles Maughan and Roger Pockett from the Dysart Roads Department contributed time and effort with back hoes to prepare and level the site, and Thomas Construction of Carnarvon came to drill the holes in the dolomite which the eagle will be mounted to.

The project continues with additional sculptures to be installed in Lochlin, Wilberforce and Stanhope some time this fall.

The Monmouth Firefighters held their annual picnic at the home and grounds of Max and Roberta Walsh, on Saturday, August 28. Family games and a barbecue were much enjoyed by all. The firefighters competed August 29 in the Annual Firefighters' Game at Bicroft.

Sympathy is extended to the family of the late Kathleen (Perry) Leach who passed away Thursday, August 26, 1999. Following Kay's wishes, a quiet, private family graveside funeral service took place on Saturday in Wilberforce. Among the family left to mourn are sister Evelyn Johnston, niece Bonnie Roberts and nephew Terry Johnston, and their families.

Evelyn has been a loving sister who visited Kay faithfully every week at Extencare in Haliburton for several years.

Sympathy is extended also to Harold and Ruby Alden with the death of Harold's brother-in-law, Joseph Pearce of Norland.

The Threads of Family History slide show was presented at the Outpost on August 24. This time the program featured guest spinner and weaver, Christine Roberts, of Baptiste Lake, near Bancroft.

Christine brought her wool samples. Some were still greasy, and smelling of sheep, others washes, carded and dyed. She answered lots of questions and shared some interesting sheep shearing stories.

Several participants displayed woven placemats, bags, and rugs, as well as lace trimmed christening gowns and framed stitchery. A special treat was the twice woven rug kindly loaned by Wendy Bateman, a well-known weaver and weaving arts teacher. Her "Aunt Winn's Rug", was one of the winning items in the slides shown at the session, loaned from Ontario Genealogical Society.

Fall turkey feasts boast succulent reputations

■ Big dinner to be held at Dwight Community Centre, September 11

community news

dorset

Phyllis Briscoe
704-2237

Birthday greetings to Amy and Murray Ross, Arnold Brown, Gloria Morris, and Teri Debour.

Congratulations to Arnold and Shirley Brown, who celebrate their 50th year of wedded bliss on September 3. We wish them much happiness and many more years of a happy life together.

September is when millions of bright, shining, happy, laughing, happy faces turn toward school. They belong to mothers.

September is also a month of beauty. The foliage is beginning to don its coat of many colours, of which there is none to compare. The mountain ash displays its crowning glory of red berries and nature is beginning to be erratic as usual, weather-wise.

Turkey dinners are being planned already. There will be a big one at the Dwight Community Centre on Saturday, September 11. Dinner will be served continuously from 4:30 to 7 p.m. No advance tickets. Cost is $10, children under 14, $5, preschoolers, free, proceeds to go to Lake of Bays United churches. This annual event is known for being an excellent dinner with delicious food, and plenty of it, so start your turkey feasting early and attend this event.

The Dorset Recreation Centre Summer Day Camp would like to thank Steve Woolman and the Dorset Volunteer Fire Department for the special tour of the department on August 21. Steve brought a truck to the parkette and let the children see what it was like to hold a fire hose. Of course, everyone had their swim suits on and a great time was had by all. Thanks, Steve.

Day Camp wrapped up on August 27 with a barbecue and piñatas made by the children. The Rec.

Centre says thanks to all who participated and Joni and Bob Kemp, and Colleen Symes for making the summer such a fun one. Hope to see everyone again next summer.

I had a long chat with Audrey Whitworth, via telephone, about a week ago, and was delighted, as I know all of his friends will be, to hear that Len is making steady progress in his recovery. Audrey says it will be a long, slow trip to complete recovery, but he is now able to sit in a regular wheelchair. He even took a couple of steps, in a walker, and with a therapist on either side holding on to him. Just a start, but what a difference from a few weeks ago when Len was admitted to hospital. Audrey spend every day at the hospital but seems cheerful, still has her sense of humour, and seems to be weathering the storm very well. We send them our best.

A bundle of joy arrived to Kari and Fred Aubin-Vardy on Friday, August 27. Jordan James came into this world weighing 7 lbs., 14-1/2 oz. Congratulations to all.

H.H. A small bowl of ground coffee placed in the refrigerator will eliminate unpleasant odours.

Essay contest appeals to young nature lovers

The Canadian Alliance of Wildlife Partners says today's youth are the guardians of tomorrow's lands and waters.

It wants to make a special effort in educating children about natural resources. With that goal in mind, CAWP is holding an Essay Contest for Ontario school children in Grades 5 and 6. The theme is "How I spent my summer Outdoors". A panel of outdoors personalities will judge the entries.

Judging will be based on content, spelling, grammar, originality and creativity. We hope it will motivate students to pay attention to the outdoors and perhaps develop a better understanding and respect for wildlife.

The contest runs September 7-27. There will be great prizes.

For more information: Andrew J. S. Rubaszek at PO Box 395, Station P, Toronto, M5S 2Z1, or 416-

978-3514, 416-282-5233, or FAX at 416-978-8532, or <mailto:andy@zoo.utoron.to.ca>

Entry forms will be available August 30 on the CAWP web site <http://www.outdoors.on.ca/cawp/kids/essay/>

Monmouth firefighters enjoy more leisurely pursuits at annual picnic

by HILDA CLARK

The Monmouth Firefighters held their annual picnic at the home and grounds of Max and Roberta Walsh, on Saturday, August 28. Family games and a barbecue were much enjoyed by all. The firefighters competed Sunday, August 29 in the Annual Firefighters' Game hosted this year in Bicroft.

Sympathy of the community is extended to the family of the late Kathleen (Perry) Leach who passed away Thursday, August 26, 1999. Following Kay's wishes, a quiet, private family graveside funeral service took place on Saturday in Wilberforce. Among the family left to mourn are sister Evelyn Johnston, niece Bonnie Roberts and nephew Terry Johnston, and their families.

Evelyn has been a loving sister who visited Kay faithfully every week at Extencicare in Haliburton for several years.

Sympathy is extended also to Harold and Ruby Alden with the death of Harold's brother-in-law, Joseph Pearce of Norland.

Threads of Family History: The slide show was presented for the second time at the Outpost on August 24. This time the program featured guest spinner and weaver, Christine Roberts, who lives in the Baptiste Lake area near Bancroft.

The small group attending was delighted with Christine's demonstration of spinning and the explanation of samples of wool she brought. Some were still greasy, and smelling of sheep, others washes, carded and dyed. Christine spoke of her weaving projects as well as answering lots of questions, and listening to some interesting sheep and sheep shearing stories.

Several participants displayed woven placemats, bags, tablecloths and rugs, as well as lace trimmed christening gowns and framed stitchery. A special treat was the twice woven rug kindly loaned by Wendy Bateman, a well-known weaver and weaving arts teacher. This piece, "Aunt Winn's Rug", was one of the winning items in the slides shown at the session. These were on loan from the Ontario Genealogical Society.

A DIME A DAY WILL DO IT:

Last June, Lil Haight, at right, gave fellow members of the Fort Irwin Residents Association "dime bags". Every day, they were to put a dime into the kitty to raise money for the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation. A year later, the results have certainly added up. Mrs. Haight presented Foundation chairperson Dale Walker with a cheque for an impressive $1,014.60.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MONMOUTH

TO THE MEMBERS OF COUNCIL, INHABITANTS AND RATEPAYERS OF THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MONMOUTH

We have audited the consolidated balance sheet of the Corporation of the Township of Monmouth as at December 31, 1998 and the consolidated statement of operations for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Township's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform an audit to obtain reasonable assurance whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation.

In our opinion, these consolidated financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Township as at December 31, 1998 and the results of its operations for the year then ended in accordance with the accounting principles disclosed in note 1 to the consolidated financial statements.

709 IN MEMORIAM

SISSON, AUDREY - In memory of a beloved wife, mother and grandmother, who left us August 30, 1998.
Treasured thoughts of one so dear
Often bring a silent tear,
Thoughts of scenes from our past,
Years roll by but memories last.
Husband Wes, daughter Ruth, son-in-law Everett, grandson
Colin and granddaughter Michelle.

STEVENS - In fond and loving memory of our mother and nan,
Hazel Stevens, who passed away
September 4, 1998.
Although it has been a year of sorrow and memories of the loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of her today are the ones who loved her best.
The flowers we lay upon our mom's grave will wither and decay
But the love for mom who lies beneath, will never fade away.
In our hearts her memory lingers
Always tender, fond and true
There's not a day, mom and nan
We do not think of you.
Sadly missed and ever loved, Jack,
Marlene and families.

709 IN MEMORIAM

STEWART - In loving memory of Lorne who passed away August 30, 1997.
Sad are the hearts that loved you,
Silent are the tears that fall
Living our lives without you
Is the hardest part of all.
You did so many things for us
Your heart was kind and true
And when we needed someone
We could always count on you.
The special years will not return
When we were all together
But with love in our hearts
You will be with us forever.
We miss you, Ruth and Sheldon.

712 CARDS OF THANKS

712 CARDS OF THANKS

A VERY SPECIAL THANKS from the Gentleman of Song, and their two ladies, to our biggest fan and booster, Jan Barker.

MONMOUTH AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY extends a sincere thank you to everyone who helped to make this year's fair a success. Much appreciated are the many businesses who support us financially by advertising in the fair book and others who privately donate trophies and prize money. Equally important are the army of dedicated sales who donate their time planning, setting up, running the fair and cleaning up. Although it lasts for just one weekend, this year-round project can only be achieved with the aid of people too numerous to name. Thank you to all!

CA

WE WISH TO THANK everyone who was kind enough to send cards and make phone calls during the bereavement of our brother, Robert (Bob) Vickery. Sister Joyce and Brad Emerson, and Vera and Jack Sibbett.

ETHEL GALVIN

Special to The Echo

If August was any indication, there is a positive reaction to having the general meetings in the club room with no smoking during the meetings.

The next general meeting is in the club room on, September 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The auction sale, on August 14, was a success.

$7,200 was raised, and many went home with great bargains.

I'd like to thank those who gave me their support. There were many but some deserve special mention.

Auctioneer, Vic Ibbotson, did a super job. Lou Trepanier solicited almost $1,000 in contributions. Jan Shipley, Idella Gault, Laurie Tulk, Billy and Ed Pickard, Owen Burmania, Marilyn Giles, Elsie Massey, Sheryl Scott, Del Galvin and Marg Brooks.

Many people are already talking about next year, but I would like to challenge all members to come up with a fall fundraising event.

It would be nice to see the Legion get its head and shoulders above water for the year 2000.

NEXUS CONCERT RAISES FUNDS FOR NORLAND FIREFIGHTERS:

The internationally acclaimed percussion ensemble Nexus gave a benefit concert for the Norland Firefighters Association on August 1 in Norland. The concert was held to raise funds for the firefighters' millennium project to purchase a new pumper truck. Proceeds from the concert generated almost $3,000 towards the new truck. The audience, which came close to filling the Norland Recreation Centre, gave the musicians a resounding, standing ovation as the last drumbeat was heard. In this photo, Laxton/Digby/Longford Reeve John Macklem, joins Norland Fire Chief Don Logan and Deputy Chief Roger Gostlin, in thanking Nexus for their enchanting performance and for contributing their time to this project. Nexus member John Wyre, a resident of Norland, said he hoped a fundraising concert could become an annual event.
